"As the greatest lessons of Nature through the universe are perhaps the lessons of variety and freedom, the same present the greatest lessons also in New World politics and progress," Walt Whitman writes at the beginning of Democratic Vistas. Whitman's emphasis on diversity, democracy, and individual freedom may provide a cue among many possible others for "America After Nature: Democracy, Culture, Environment," the 61st Annual Conference of the German Association for American Studies. Whitman's contention that nature informs the concepts and ideas at the core of America's political, cultural, and social structure, and contemporary scholars' repeated argumentation that nature's restructuring will not remain without consequences for the political, social, and economic constitution of future cultures may provide conceptual and historical frameworks for the 2014 GAAS conference. The topic of the conference reflects the concern of the interdisciplinary venture of American Studies with political participation and social outreach and the willingness of the American Studies community to engage in topical debates in full recognition of its scholarly integrity and academic responsibility.

The variety of lectures and workshops gathered for the conference program addresses affiliations of (American) nature with democracy and art; a reevaluation of the cultural, intellectual and political histories of US-American environmentalism and their relation to global forms and manifestations of green thought and activism; a revision of problems and concepts such as environmental justice and environmental governmentality within and beyond the conceptual frame of America, the U.S. and the Americas; and questions that engage the politics and poetics as well as the ethics and aesthetics of representation under the condition of the current ecological crisis. In the best tradition of GAAS annual conventions since the 1950s, "America After Nature: Democracy, Culture, Environment" implicates central issues, approaches, theories, and materials that have determined the scholarly field of American Studies over the past decades and that will certainly continue to drive our discipline as transnational American Studies. The 2014 Annual Conference of the German Association for American Studies comes at a point in time when German American Studies enjoys the highest national and international reputation for its path-breaking scholarship, its defining openness to institutional, curricular, and social reform, and its proven role as a turntable in international academic transfer and exchange. At the same time, the ongoing debate in Germany about educational restructurings, uncertainties in research funding, and the processes and directions of internationalizing German universities put a heavy strain on many American Studies scholars and programs. It will be crucial in the years ahead to secure and extend the decidedly interdisciplinary potential and the highly visible international position of German American Studies in the best interest of American Studies research and teaching and for the benefit of all the people pursuing the project of American Studies.

Special gratitude goes to the local organizers and American Studies colleagues at the University of Würzburg, to all contributors to the conference program, and to all sponsors of the 2014 annual convention for their generous support. I am convinced that we will see a most productive and memorable conference which will have a lasting impact on American Studies in Germany and beyond.

Udo Hebel
President of the German Association for American Studies
Greetings from the Local Organizer

Welcome to all of you—colleagues, friends, and distinguished guests—to Unterfranken and to the Julius-Maximilians-Universität Würzburg! This year’s Annual Convention of the German Association for American Studies (GAAS) marks the third time that we at Würzburg have had the pleasure and the privilege of hosting the yearly national gathering of our professional organization. The topic of the first conference held here, in 1981, was “Politics, Culture, and Society in Andrew Jackson’s America,” followed fifteen years later, in 1996, with a focus on “The South”. Whether it is merely serendipity or an expression of Würzburg’s genius loci I leave for others to decide, but the lectures and papers to be presented at this year’s conference once again will propose and query correspondences between democracy and culture, nationality and regionality, nature and society. The 1981 and 1996 GAAS conventions were organized by Prof. Gerhard Hoffmann, who was appointed the first Chair of American Studies at Würzburg in 1971. His research and teaching concentrated on postmodernism, the American novel, and Native American literature and culture. Between 1972 and 1978 Hoffmann served as Treasurer/Executive Director, and from 1978 to 1981 as President of the GAAS. He is also one of the three editors-in-chief of the renowned American Studies Monograph Series published by Universitätsverlag Winter, Heidelberg. In 2013, the GAAS decided to publicly honor Prof. Hoffmann’s engagement in the advancement of American Studies in Germany as well as his academic achievements in our discipline with an honorary membership. And I am so pleased to announce that the certificate of recognition will be presented to him here, at the opening ceremony of this year’s conference. After Prof. Hoffmann’s retirement in 1998/99, Prof. Jochen Achilles was appointed Chair of American Studies. He continued the Würzburg tradition of concentrating on the history and culture of contemporary US-American (and Anglophone) literatures, but shifted the focus to the study of American drama and theater as well as the short story. This year’s conference, “America After Nature: Democracy, Culture, Environment” marks the most recent repositioning of the research agenda of American Studies at Würzburg – one that bends toward an interdisciplinary inquiry into the political, social, epistemological, and aesthetic challenges that confront the American democratic experiment in the “age of ecology” (J. Radkau). Once again, welcome! We hope that you find the conference stimulating and informative and enjoy your time here as well as your stay in the city of Würzburg.

Catrin Gersdorf
Chair of American Studies

Workshop 12. Teaching American Democracy, Culture, and Environment in the EFL Classroom

Workshop 13. American Romanticism and the Politicization of Nature

Workshop 14. PGF Workshop
Our workshop will consist of three thematic clusters which will each be allotted one hour of discussion time: 1) Theoretical Perspectives on Posthumanism; 2) Posthumanist Narratives; 3) Posthumanist Politics. Each of these clusters will include 4-5 participants engaging in a critical discussion based on their paper proposals. Instead of conventional paper presentations, participants will be given up to 7 minutes to present their main arguments in a concise and precise way. Individual presentations will be followed by a roundtable/general discussion of about 30 mins. It is our aim to bring together a whole range of perspectives, identify prevalent theoretical positions, and explore the field of critical posthumanism in/for American Studies. We therefore want to encourage lively debates from a variety of different angles rather than only presenting a few selected perspectives.

1) Theoretical Perspectives on Posthumanism

Hanjo Berressem (Köln)
“We Have Never Been Human”: Posthumanism Before Posthumanism

Laura Bieger (Freiburg)
Posthuman Belonging: Contemplating the Narrative Agency of Networking Self

The Postgraduate Forum hosts a panel discussion with all keynote speakers which is primarily intended for post-graduate level scholars. The format allows young scholars and the keynote speakers to engage in vigorous scholarly exchange on the overall conference topic in general and the respective keynotes in particular. In preparation for the workshop — so to speak as ‘food for thought’ — the keynote speakers have provided drafts of their lectures and/or topical publications. We will make this material available in advance via the PGF newsletter and to all other participants interested in our workshop (please e-mail us at pgf@dgfa.de). We are looking forward to lively discussions.

Nature: Environmentalism and the Interpretation of Western Thought (MIT Press 2001) and co-editor of the Oxford Handbook of Environmental Political Theory (forthcoming) and The Environmental Politics of Sacrifice (MIT Press, 2010). During the 2012-2013 academic year, Meyer worked as a research fellow at the Rachel Carson Center for Environment and Society in Munich.

Julie Sze
Julie Sze is an Associate Professor and the Director of American Studies at UC Davis and the founding director of the Environmental Justice Project for UC Davis’s John Muir Institute for the Environment. Her research investigates environmental justice and environmental inequality, culture and environment, race, gender and power, and urban/community health and activism. Winner of the 2008 John Hope Franklin Publication Prize for the best published book in American Studies, Sze’s book Noxious New York: The Racial Politics of Urban Health and Environmental Justice (MIT Press 2007) analyzes the culture, politics, and history of environmental justice activism in New York City within the larger context of privatization, deregulation, and globalization.

Frank Zelko
Frank Zelko teaches in the Department of History at the University of Vermont. His research focuses on the history of environmental movements and his monograph Make It a Green Peace! The Rise of Counter-cultural Environmentalism (Oxford University Press, 2013) is the first serious book-length history of Greenpeace. Zelko has published work on environmental activism in the US, Canada, Germany and Australia, and is currently editing a volume on the environmental history of the world’s oceans. During the 2003-2004 academic year, Zelko was Post-Doctoral Research Fellow in Environmental History at the German Historical Institute in Washington, D.C.
